Criteria

The journey of inter-professional learning about, with and from each other, we consider the following learning outcomes to be complimentary to individual programmes of study in preparing students for quality collaborative health, psychology and social care practice. Through engagement with inter-professional learning, students will:

- LO1: Demonstrate an enhanced understanding of roles and responsibilities of their own and other health and social care professionals through respecting, understanding and supporting the roles of other professionals and the changing nature of health and social care roles and boundaries.
- LO2: Discuss stereotyping and professional prejudices and the impact of these and other barriers to inter professional working.
- LO3: Demonstrate a set of knowledge, skills, competencies and attitudes that are common to all Health and Social Care professions and that underpin the delivery of patient/client focused services,
- LO4: Develop teamwork skills and improved knowledge of the nature of multidisciplinary teamwork and subsequently make an effective contribution as an equal member of an inter professional team,
- LO5: Apply learning from others in inter professional teams in a variety of contexts through collaboration with other professionals in practice, online, in programme teams, and on college wide initiatives and projects.

Through completing pre-workshop workbooks and discussion on the day you have successfully examined:

- The barriers to collaboration - why multi-disciplinary/ multi-agency team working is not easy
- The principles of collaborative leadership - why it is all about deals and relationships
- The key skills and behavioural traits of successful collaborative leaders
- Different models of multi-disciplinary and multi-agency team working
- The four essentials to successful inter-professional collaborative working:
 - Addressing the why
 - Understanding each other
 - Finding a compelling common purpose
 - Working in a 'high-trust' team
